·MRS.TATUM SEEKS ARREST OF HUBBY

Obtains Warrant Charging Broker Threw Her Out of Long Island Home.

IN A WILD NIGHT RIDE

Now She's Looking for Constable to Serve the Papers-Demands Share of Home.

New York, Jan. 1e.-Another stirring chapter was added to the long and lively legal history of the marital troubles between John C. Tatum and his wife, Mary tween John C. Tatum and mis wise, and Jane Tatum, today, when Judge Hayden, of Flushing, Issued a warrant for the broker's arrest. Mrs. Tatum is made the complainant in the case and her charge is that her husband attacked her when she went to see him in their home at Great Neck, Long Island, la-t night. If the warrant has been served no return on it has been made at Flushing. At last accounts Mrs. Tatum was searching all that section of northern Long Island for constable willing to undertake the ar

Friends of the broker's wife say that her wrath in the present proceeding is not because her husband failed to win his suit for a divorce which was tried a few days ago. The real rause of her discomfiture is declared to be the broker's failure to appear for the juncheon that had been arranged for them at the Vanderbilt Hotel Saturday, at which they were expected to make progress toward reconciliation.

After leaving the Vanderbilt Hotel or the failure of the luncheon engagement Mrs. Tatum went by automobile to Pontico, the Tatum home, at Great Neck, Long Island. Arriving there, it is declared, she proceeded to take possession.

"I am here and I am going to stay," she is reported to have stated.

There to Stay.

She further announced that half of the property belonged to her and that she in-tended to "live on that half." "And." tended to "live on that half." "And," she added, "the height of my ambition is to put out of this house every one who does not belong here. Mr. Tatum was not at home and so his wife had things her own way.
Mr. Tatum came home at a little before

11 o'clock. He heard some one at the telephone. It was Mrs. Tatum. "Get out of this house" was the cheerful greeting.
"Won't! Won't!" returned Tatum briskly.

"You won't? You won't?"
